שָׁלֵם – BE WHOLE, COMPLETE

It probably never occurred to you and it may faintly amuse you to know that when someone says to you inquiringly "שָׁלוֹם לָךְ" --he is actually asking you whether you are whole, complete, in one piece. They want assurance that no part of you--fingers, toes, legs, arms, etc. is missing or broken. The root meaning of our familiar greeting word שָׁלוֹם is שָׁלֵם whole, complete. If you're whole, you're probably well and at peace.

הִשְׁתַּלֵּם – the reflexive, means to perfect oneself.

שָׁלַם – to pay for something, carries the meaning, to restore or make whole again. By paying a person for what you took from him you fill the gap you created in his possessions when you first took it.

שָׁלֵם – entirety

שָׁלַם – payment; שָׁלַם – payment, may mean "bribe."

הִשְׁלִים – the hifil causative pattern could mean either "made peace" or "made whole", the word going back to either שָׁלוֹם or שָׁלַם.

It is interesting to note that the English greeting "Hail", has the same meaning as שָׁלוֹם, namely, "being whole". When someone says "Hail" he is wishing that you are whole. "Hale" in the expression "hale and hearty" is from the same word as "hail." The Hebrew word שָׁלוֹם has given rise to a number of English words. There is Salem, a town in Massachusetts. "Salaam" is the cry of greeting spoken to a ruler or prince; it is usually accompanied by deep bows. Scholars say the English word of farewell "so-long" comes from "salaam."
